Baruch College To Require Student Vaccines

By TONI COLAVITO

According to the Director of Admissions John Fischer, incoming freshmen for the Fall semester of 1990 must show proof of immunization for measles, mumps and rubella before registering.

Students that registered in the Fall 1989 must also show proof by a certain date. However, Fischer said, "Students that registered earlier than September 1989 may not require proof, but they have to be kept on a list and the College has to keep them off campus if there is an outbreak in the school.

The Board of Directors of Baruch College in May 1990 will be voting on a referendum on a fee for immunization shots to the student center at 197 E. 2nd Street.

The vote will enable the release of $10,000 which had previously been applied to security costs to other student activities. All six students on the Board voted at their Feb. 15 meeting in favor of the proposal to cease payments of security. All five administrative and faculty members voted against the measure.

There is some fear that the vote will force the administration to cut other student services in order to be able to cover security costs at the student activity center. Sean Mason, president of the Day Session Student Government (DSSG) and an ex-officio member of the Board, said that "In the past there have been threats to close down the student activity center however I do not believe that the administration will want to take such an action due to heavy usage and anticipated protest." Joel Segall, president of the Baruch College, in an interview with the Tucker prior to the Board's meeting said that "I have talked many times on the issue and I believe that students should not be forced to pay for security but the board has demanded such actions and is not able to take up the bill. He suggested that the college rather than take up the payment of the entire amount, pay $10,000 for the first year and another $10,000 each additional year so that the student burden will eventually be phased out.

This sum, according to Mason, however amounts to about 10 percent of the total cost of student payment towards security and with inflation and other factors considered, the percentage covered will drop to about four or five percent.

Asked if he thought the administration would take retaliatory action in terms of cutbacks to student services in order to come up with the money lost, Mason said that "It would only be a testament to the President's lack of commitment to students in these areas because it will show inconsistency in his gesture towards students." He went on to say that student services have suffered tremendously in the last

Board Votes to End Security Expenses

Students Fear Cutbacks in Services

The Baruch College Association's Board of Directors voted to discontinue the use of student activities money for the paying of security costs at the student center at 197 E. 2nd Street.

The Ticker cautious the students leaders on these weight factors and instead compromise on this issue. Having the college pay for the their health services next year would seem a far solution. The stand the representative leaders on Board of Directors have taken is a brilliant way to bring the issue of student fee expenditures on into the spotlight. But now that the rhetoric has been spoken, they must stand back and consider the real costs of their resolution.

College administrators claim this policy exists because the BEEK counselors have to run full registration. This is so Baruch doesn’t have to pay the counselors extra money for the work they do in August. The point is, if Baruch is going to bother to run a remedial service and support for students who need remedial tutoring, they deserve full service and support. We have just told you one of many tales that Lewin and Lopez relate. Read their op-ed, and then contact the administration and the Day Session Student Government. Tell them you are disgusted by these horror stories.

This story is played over and over again. To the administration, it is the standard response they need to this constant barrage of complaints. It is a tactic that is used as a distraction. The students that require these remedial services to improve their academic performance pay for these remedial tutors, and they deserve full service and support.

Whoever completes the medical examination—whether or not they are eligible to donate blood—will automatically be entered into the lottery. The number of prizes that will be awarded by random drawing depends on the number of blood donors!

Here's how it works. If 100 donors participate, one lucky person will receive a 35mm camera. If 150 donors participate, one will receive a camera, another lucky person will receive a telephone answering machine; if 200 donors participate, one person will receive the answering machine, another answers the receiving machine, and a third lucky winner will receive a VCR!

The first 200 donors will receive a special gift.

Baruch Phonathon Under Way

By NICOLE FARQUHARSON

This year's annual Baruch college student organization telephone campaign, Phonathon-200, has been completed.
The campaign was designed to raise funds for the school. Every phone call recorded will be sent to the administration.

Baruch students have been asked to raise money for the electrical engineering students. Events such as sell-outs, seminars and special alumni programs are just a few of the many things that Baruch
students help to sponsor.

The Phonathon is designed so that all donors will benefit.

One of the main goals of the Phonathon is to make as many people aware of the event as possible. This is done via the phone and later via mail. For more information on how to participate, contact:

"It will be a bundle for me," said
Christine Carabine, lower semester, who signed up for the call.

In a telephone interview, Segal said she would support the measure because it demolished students. She then asked the question. "We would do whatever it takes

The referendum elections would be held simultaneously with the student government elections, and it could be held in separate voting booths. The ballot must be sent to the Committee for the Student Affairs, and then it is the role of the student body to vote on it.

According to Oemire-Faye, the campus community was in favor of the referendum, and they would be encouraged to vote on the referendum and to participate in the elections.

The process of raising the students' activities fund is a lengthy
one. First the G.S.A. must seek a permit for a rally, then it is placed on the ballot for general polling. If approved, it is then in front of the Board of Trustees for review and approval. If approved, it is then sent to the President for review.

The referendum would have to be held in order to pass the referendum. In the meantime, the G.S.A. would like to have a majority of the activity fees voted for the referendum.

According to Perri, the students' activities fund is very important to the students at Baruch. It is the only fund that they have the lowest activities fees, but in addition, all the graduate students are forced to receive the money for the fees.

The graduate students feel they are being neglected by the Administration, and they have the least amount of students in the school. It's normal, I explained
students who attended the survey, and then the majority of the student body voting in the referendum is not true, according to Segall.

Street News - A Source of Income For the Homeless

By Helena Nova

Each day, as I travel to and from school, I am constantly approached by numerous homeless men and women. Sometimes I am served with blankets, sometimes change. Hoping it won’t go to drugs or alcohol. But, I often ask myself what is wrong with this picture? Is my spare change merely throwing money at a problem or is it really making a difference.

Each of us have encountered different types of panhandlers, selling newspapers called STREET NEWS. As a student, I have been approached many times, "Is this legitimate or just another gimmick?" Is it legit, and is it really compelling me to buy a copy for $3 each? I figured I should give it a try, and I have read what STREET NEWS had to offer.

Recently, I encountered a different type of panhandler, selling newspapers under STREET NEWS. He was middle-aged, and his story was, "Is this legitimate or just another gimmick?" He looked legitimate and my curiosity compelled me to buy a copy for $3 each. I figured I should give it a try, and I have read what STREET NEWS had to offer.

For those who are not sure, STREET NEWS is a non-profit charitable organization that provides jobs for people who want and need to help themselves by selling the newspaper. Also, it serves as an opportunity to get out of the streets and achieve self-esteem and motivation necessary to overcome the hardships and handicaps of the streets.

So, let’s get in for the reader, and remember, there are many interesting articles about real people in real life situations. One article, in particular which captured my interest was, "Employing the Unemployable." It was about the Wild Cat Services Corporation, and how the participants in this service made the cycle of welfare dependency, substance abuse, and the stigma of a prison.

Recently interesting article entitled "Nimby Syndrome," was about the "Nimby" problem; not in my backyard. It looked as if my spare change was being spent to avoid having their lives disrupted by homeless shelters and clean and low-income housing.

There are many out of the many articles within STREET NEWS. In addition, major corporations such as General Electric, Citibank, Cushman & Wakefield, Westinghouse Broadcast, Inc. and many others advertise and support the newspaper as a way of letting the public know that they care about the community.

As a result of STREET NEWS, we see a remarkable difference in the lives of vibrant men and women who are doing something for themselves. One particular young man which comes to mind is Marta Garcia Smith. Smith, who is many people seen to be just another homeless man trying to get on his feet again, has a history of being in the military. He worked in Wall Street and New York hospitals after he completed service. He attended STREET NEWS during the day and attended John Jay College in the evenings. On any given day, someone was handing out newspapers to the homeless, we can and want to offer. are many interesting articles that supports the homeless.

Coping With Academic Dishonesty

By RAFAEL MARTINEZ

The American Dean of Students Ronald M. Aaron is in the midst of doing a national study on academic dishonesty and how educational institutions are coping with the situation.

Dean Aaron said that the Baruch Code of Conduct states that if a student is caught cheating academic dishonesty the faculty has to report the case especially if the student admits to it.

This information is contained in the Baruch College Undergraduate Bulletin under Students Rights and Responsibilities, which outlines the rules and regulations governing Baruch students.

Academic dishonesty can range from the altering of college documents such as the use of registration on the registration card to copying the answers of the person next to you during an exam, to stealing an exam, borrowing or lending a paper to a friend or borrowing a paper.

Dean Aaron and that dishonesty is a concern to all students because it effects those who work honestly to achieve their grades and also effects students who are cheating but don't know what to do because they don't want to turn in their peers.

The faculty should have the ability to deal with academic dishonesty by making statements concerning acceptable academic conduct, by discussing the code of conduct and by using better techniques for giving exams and thus use the exam for each exam.

Dean Aaron said that many students are under the false assumption that academic dishonesty is controlled by students facing academic disaster. "Students who are better students usually are the ones who do it and are looking for the edge."

"Overcoming the Gotta's"

By Robert J. Kriegel, Ph.D.

The alarm sounds. "I really really gotta do this."

I've gotta finish this before the deadline. You can imagine the stress, the worry, the anxiety. You may feel overwhelmed, you may feel depressed, you may feel angry, and you may feel like giving up. But you can't afford to give up.

Today's college campuses are pressure cookers. Many students come to college with the hope of getting a degree, but what they really want is to avoid getting a grade. They are driven by fear, not by passion. They are driven by a desire to avoid failure, not by a desire to succeed.

The cure is to shift from anxiety to action. You can control whether someone will agree with you, what they think of you, the impact your actions have on others, and the outcome of your work. You can control the stress and pain that your course grades might not reflect. By focusing on the outcome, you can avoid the stress and pain associated with the worry of failure.

So the next time you feel overwhelmed, remember this.

Did you know that Baruch has its very own “world of art”? Yes, our own Art Gallery, nestled right in the heart of our campus at 135 East 22nd on the ground floor - right next door to the student center (just east of Lexington). This month the Baruch College Gallery is hosting a collection of work from Catalonia, an autonomously governed region in Spain. This collection of works from 11 artists represents "The Second Vanguard" of artists from Catalonia.
The names of "the first vanguard", Pablo Picasso, Joan Miro and Salvador Dali are very well known. And like their predecessors, Picasso, Miro and Dali, the artists of "The Second Vanguard", J.M.
Pijuan, Marcel Marti, Joan Pone, Albert Rafols Casamada, J.J.
Serraart, Xavier Corbera, Lluvia Plana, J.J. Tharrats, and Maria Jorda, have represented Catalonia in the United States, the Baruch community most particularly, a wealth of talent and vision.

The idea behind this exhibit must be credited to our gallery director and curator of the show, Sandra Kraskin. The gallery has free shows per year and as Ms. Kraskin pointed out, they are specifically designed for Baruch College students as the target audience. This show was executed with our Spanish-speaking students in mind. The next show planned will be about African contemporary art.

The exhibit flows smoothly and easily from piece to piece, giving each work of art the space it needs, yet allowing an easy segue to the pieces preceding and following. The collection of works, two or three pieces from each of the eleven pieces, is poignant and mandatory. They are carved, sculpted, painted, or some medium combination of mediums. The collection in this exhibit, each medium, express their interpretation of the on-going evolution of art, the meaning of art, the direction of art.

You don’t have to be an artist or a critic to appreciate the collection of art and work that Ms. Kraskin has made available to all of us.
Each, including the sculptures, is inviting and well. Find in each something only you can see. The beauty of art is only what the artist intended when they painted the painting or sculpted the sculpture, but when you are at the viewer, the one who comes to appreciate, sees in your particular way, the opportunity to expand your horizons. Pick-up a free color catalogue and ask questions.

The opening reception, held February 8th, which included the President of the Autonomous Government of Catalan, as well as four of the artists on exhibit, was a great success and added to the aura of importance this show carries for the Baruch campus community.

The show only runs until March 7. Take advantage, the gallery is open Monday through Friday, from 12 to 9 pm.

The Hunt For Red October!

Based on the best-selling novel by Tom Clancy, "RED OCTOBER" was directed by John McTiernan, the director who blasted Bruce Willis and a bunch of "hero" actors into big bucks for Paramount Pictures and an increased sign up ratio for the armed forces. The Hunt For Red October was for the navy what Top Gun was for the air force. Top Gun was the top grossing film of 1986. That translated into a box-office bonanza for Paramount Pictures, who have already sold over $6,000,000 worth of Top Gun merchandise. Paramount Pictures has, however, pulled out all the stops in hope of recouping some of its lost revenue and to ensure that Top Gun tops the box office charts in 1986.

Although Tom Cruise was apparently busy at the time of casting for "RED OCTOBER," Paramount lured assembled a sure-fire cast guaranteed to bring people to the movie theater. Tim Curry, Arnold Schwarzenegger, Carl Reiner, James Earl Jones, James Earl Jones, and Richard Jordan round out the ensemble cast. The Hunt For Red October will do for the navy what Top Gun did for the air force. Top Gun was the top grossing film of 1986. That translated into a box-office bonanza for Paramount Pictures, who have already sold over $6,000,000 worth of Top Gun merchandise. "REVENGE" NOSEDIVES INTO BOREDOM

REVENGE. Starring Kevin Costner, Anthony Quinn, and Madeleine Stowe. Directed by Tony Scott. Screenplay by Tony Scott. Running Time: 125MIN. Rated R.

Vengeance is sweet," says the Lord. THANK GOD for that because REVENGE, starring Kevin Costner, Anthony Quinn, and Madeleine Stowe, is a complete bore.

Kevin Costner is a man of few words, but he is very effective in his role as a one-time Los Angeles Police photographer who becomes a ruthless hit man.

The story is simple: Costner's character, John Baker, is a man who has seen the worst of life and has decided to take revenge on those who have wronged him.

Anthony Quinn is a standout as the powerful and charismatic gangster, Vito Costello. His performance is both frightening and mesmerizing, making him a perfect foil for Costner.

Madeleine Stowe is miscast as the love interest of Costner. Her role is underdeveloped, and her chemistry with Costner is lacking.

The film's plot is predictable and lacks any real surprises. The dialogue is stilted and the pacing is slow.

REVENGE is a film that fails to deliver on its promise of action and drama. It is a disappointment for fans of the genre and a bore for everyone else.

There's definitely power in this movie. Nothing else.HARD TO KILL packs a wallop. Steven Stolni, who made his debut in 1987 with ABOVE THE LAW, is back for more. Directed by Anthony Mann.

Music, Politics, And Oat Bran

BY QUAN T

It has been almost two years since The House of Lords released their first album in England. Now after a few more complications and a new record deal, The House of Lords is releasing their first American release on a major label, Polygram. This self-produced LP is produced by several different groups, including The House of Lords. PolyGram has been a key player in the music industry for many years.

The album, titled "Sun Rising," is a collection of songs that are sure to be a hit. The tracks range from simple acoustic numbers to more complex arrangements.

"Sun Rising" is a great album, and I think it's a good sign for the future of the band. The music is well-crafted and the vocals are powerful. Overall, it's a great album that I think everyone will enjoy.

The House of Lords is a great band, and I'm sure they will continue to be successful in the music industry. I can't wait to hear more from them in the future.

When they called, I had heard of THE BOMB, but I didn't think I had heard of any of their music. When I approached them to find out more, I found out that they were not very interested in answering questions about their music. The press conferences were later that same day, Thursday, February 28 and their concert was that night, Friday, March 1.

The only problem is that the Good Girls are just that: good. There isn't anything outrageously outstanding about the song that I would think the group is capable of being a really big band. I think it is Possible that a lot of people Will really

I imagine I wasn't the only one terribly shocked by the new configuration heavyweight championship. James "Buster" Douglas. The challenger for Tyson's title.

I hope Douglas comes through Saturday night. Still waiting. An answer. If Douglas did pull off the shock, I'll probably make out better than before the sport.

If he fights out of the furnace for a new crown, he will. If Tyson's title was on the line, there's no way he'd be fighting.

Douglas is on the line. Douglas is on the line. If he can't handle the pressure and comes through, there's no way he'll lose.

He's not a good fighter, but I'm not working on, either.

Easy as one, two, three. The Baruch Statesmen whipped Fordham in three straight games to raise their record to 9-6. After falling behind 1-0 in game one, Baruch would not trail again in the opening game.

Two blistering serves by setter, Huy Tran gave Baruch a 5-1 lead. A Fordham time-out couldn't slow the momentum. Led by a Chris Demers kill, David Rosado's multiple hits and continued strong serving by Tran, Baruch stormed to a 12-1 lead and cruised to a 15-2, first-game victory.

Game two was a bit tougher. A Billy Sappia smash gave the Statesmen a 6-3 lead. More strong play by Sappia including two kills and a well-placed dink gave Baruch a seemingly insurmountable 10-4 lead. Fordham slowly came back and eventually knotted the game at 13.

The Statesmen regained their composure and won 15-13. Game three was a washout. Fordham scored zip, zilch, nada, not-a-point. 15-0, Baruch.

"This is your body speaking. You have been having a horrible nightmare. It is now over. Your team's season is finished. You may now relax and enjoy the next eight months. Go to Club Med for a few weeks and rest up. Let your high blood pressure (which no doubtably came about during this dismal season) subside." What was this nightmare that Coach Rankis was having? Basically, it was about this promising team, who finished over .500 last season, made it to the CUNY Conference semi-finals, got a Division III post season bid and came into this season with much higher hopes.

What transpired was a team that finished 10 games under .500, a seventh place finish in the CUNY Conference, a very short stay in the CUNY tournament and tons of questions marks which the coaching staff must answer before November.

When we last left you two weeks ago, Baruch had won three, yes, three, games in a row. We continue with the final five games of this dreaded season. On Feb. 5, the Statesmen, looking to win their fourth in a row, visited conference rival York College. The game was well played and was very close until the final buzzer. Baruch could have won this game and should have won this game. With six seconds left in the game, Tyrone Greaves was fouled. Greaves led the team with 16 points with Cecillio Freeman adding another 15.

"We didn't get the talent level that we were expecting." Sometimes what a team needs is a loss to get them going again. A 2 point game will not usually do the trick because they almost won. A blowout works well.
