Police Prevail Over Protest

By Eric Loyola

Thursdays, March 26, a student threatened a representative of Jews for Jesus who had been invited to speak by Baruch's Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship, saying "I'd like to kill you..." The threat took place in an exchange between the representative and the student during a presentation on the role of Christ in the Passover.

"Jews for Jesus?" the student asked.

"Yes, that's right," Steve Davis, a member of Jews for Jesus, answered with a British accent.

"You're from Jews for Jesus?" the first asked again, seeking more than just a commemoration of an event which happened thousands of years ago; Jews believe the night of the Passover sedar should be a deep experience.

"I am," asserted Davis. "We're having a meeting..." We're going to try to prove this is the Passover," he added.

"Why are you f-ing using the name Jews?" the student asked. "You've got no right to use it."

"We're having a meeting right now, but if you'd like to talk afterwards..." The irate Jewish student cut off his offer and said, "I'd like to kill you afterwards." He then left abruptly as he had entered room 904 of 360 Park Avenue South. Davis refocused on where he had left off and continued the presentation called "Christ in the Passover, his impactive face making itself separate from the blurred expressions of the audience.

"I reported there was a threat on our speaker, because that's what it was, and we also believe that they were the ones who also took down our flyer advertising the presentation."

Police said Joanne Acosta, an officer of IVCF.

"The report of the incident reached the desk of Dean Carl Kirchmer. "I would like to proceed with disciplinary action. That behavior cannot be tolerated on the campus," said Kirchmer.

"A delegation of students met with acting President Joyce Brown and Vice President Samuel Johnson at about 3:45 a.m. in the unit auditorium, which served to conceal the identities of the students with Thornhill's premises to preclude any confrontations with police, which had in the past caused Thornhill to retreat. But Baruch students were still unable to achieve all of their aims. "We wanted to take the Student Center but we didn't have enough people because the people from Tech had to go take their school tonight," Thornhill says. "And that's why some of them are in the hospital... they clashed with the cops."

A delegation of students met with acting President Joyce Brown and Vice President Samuel Johnson at about 3:45 a.m. in the unit auditorium, which served to conceal the identities of the students with three students were arrested. The four officers were injured.

The eleventh-hour cancellation of the event has but only recently served to conceal the event which happened years ago; Jews believe the night of the Passover sedar should be a deep personal experience.

"I was indignant to find out that Jews for Jesus had brought to Baruch its brand of garbage," said Jonathan Loring, the campus representative for the American Zionist Youth Foundation. "The sedar they were presenting was just another act of camouflage from this group, whose members have abandoned their ancestral way of life and are no more kosher than pork."

The point of contention between Jews for Jesus and the Jewish community pertains to the most basic of its tenets and goals, according to its most fervent critics, its most oxymoronic characteristic. The group falls into the category of "Hebrew Christians," which maintain that a person can be Jewish and accept Jesus as the Messiah. "It's an organization designed to brainwash Jews," says Mipa, the Sephardic Jew.

Search Committee Selects Five Candidates For Baruch Presidency

By Hilary Coulton

The Presidential Search Committee has released the names of five candidates for the presidency of Baruch College.

The candidates will be interviewed on campus by a total of five committees, each made up of administrators, department chairs, faculty, administration representatives, or students.

Wilson Stimson, president of the Campus Senate Government, says, "We tried to make it (the student commit­tee) representative of the student body. It will be made up of a total of 15 students: eight seniors, five sophomores, and four graduate students. As yet, the students have not been selected."

After the campus visits have

Presidential Candidates Square Off in Debate

The following is a transcript of the debate between the candidates for the presidency of the Day Student Senate Government (DSSG) at Baruch College. The debate was held on April 17, 1991, at the Ticker and WHBM, the radio station of Baruch College.

Our first candidate is Neil Cohen. He's a junior, and he's the candidate from the newly formed party, Baruch's Urban Democracy.

Neil: Good afternoon. My name is Neil Cohen. The reason we formed our own party basically had to do with the fact that the parties that are currently existing are relatively inefficient. They were well-meaning, but they didn't work. There was a lot on our stall, and our organization was just a little bit too much of a problem. The only way we could have had the adequate foundation for the party was to have an on-campus tutorial service. They would help us deal with that and make sure that they make a significant difference.

Another issue is the tuition increase. We need to take into account that we need to attract the students. I have spoken with one of the presidents of Hunter College, who is an administrator of the CUNY system. We need to make that significant.

Also, I'd like to emphasize on what we need to do. We need to come together and work together. What we need to do is to make sure that we have these evaluations and make sure that they make a significant difference.

Our second candidate is Lavonda Davis. She's a senior. She's been involved in the Baruch student government, and she feels that maybe you should cut spending and review your policies and see where you're going wrong. We need to spend for the sake of spending, and also have a checks and balance system. We want to control the spending. We can also institute a more strict accounting system.

Lavonda: Good afternoon. I'm Lavonda Davis. I'm running for president. My name is Lavonda Davis. I'm running for president of the DSSG. I've chosen a reform in hopes that I could better utilize the full potential of the student body. We need to establish the DSSG as an information center. I wish to make students aware of the different clubs and organizations that we have on campus.

I'd like to focus on the issue of child care, which is a benefit for the parents on the campus. We need to provide services for the students and their families. We need to make sure that we have adequate facilities and services for the students.

Lavonda: We could have a meeting and discuss issues that affect everyone at Baruch College. We can also make sure that all the resources for the activities are put together, educate groups about other groups and help the families, but rather to collect all the resources for the activities and have those evaluations and make sure that they make a significant difference.

Our third candidate is Anthony Mirabile. He's an upper freshman. He's been involved in the Baruch College community and he feels that the student government is not as effective as it should be. He wants to provide better services for Baruch students, and he's running for president of the DSSG.

Anthony: Good afternoon. My name is Anthony Mirabile. I'm a sophomore, and I'm running for president of the DSSG. I've chosen it in hopes that I could better utilize the full potential of the student body. We need to provide students with better services.

I think that the entire system that is in place right now should not be in place. We really need to basically get the students involved and establish a network. I have spoken with one of the presidents of Hunter College, who is an administrator of the CUNY system. We need to make that significant.

Our fourth candidate is Daveson Wilson, who's a lower senior. He currently is the Executive Secretary of the Day Student Government. He's been involved in the Baruch College community and he feels that the student government is not as effective as it should be. He wants to provide better services for Baruch students, and he's running for president of the DSSG.

Daveson: Good afternoon. I'm Dave Wilson. My name is Dave Wilson. I'm running for president of the DSSG. I've chosen it in hopes that I could better utilize the full potential of the student body. We need to establish the DSSG as an information center. I wish to create a network of my own made up of volunteers. And finally, I wish to attract a more effective campaign against the proposed tuition increase.

I ran for office as my own expense, and I will appreciate your vote in the upcoming election. Remember, vote for Anthony in a vote for change.

I have been noticing about tuition increases. I have been looking myself with the issues? I would be glad to give my opinion on it.

is affecting Hunter College, John Jay College, and other CUNY schools. What we fail to realize is that this is not just affecting Baruch College. This is affecting all of Baruch College and the students of Baruch College.

We did suffer a huge strike this past year, a strike that lasted for 11 months. We have been noticed. These are the things that make the student body strong. We need to keep this in our focus at all times. We cannot forget about this.

A.M.: That would have to be published inside The Ticker or something like that. We can argue back and forth, but I'm not sure if you have ever heard of a Monica Rich, Actually, the most important thing is that we need to network with them. We need to network with these people and then talk to them and ask them what they are doing.

D.W.: First thing I'd like to say is I agree wholeheartedly with both my colleagues. I don't think the point can be made strong enough that when money is cut, we need the people to make a lot of noise. We have to make sure that people are feeling the pressure because if we don't make sure they are feeling the pressure, we will not get our point across. We need to network with a lot of people and talk to them and let them know what we want.

Shownya Shamsideen to Anthony Mirabile.

My name is Apollo Matthew and I am currently the Vice President of the DSSG, and my question is, What will you do if a tuition crisis happens again, what exactly will you do, I am going to address this to everyone of you?

L.D.: We are represented by one woman and I just want to know that one woman can make a difference, and I am one who can and will make a difference.

Questions from the Audience.

A.M.: Why are there no women on the ticket? Because it's been shown that they're not coming to take our place. Because if they didn't come to take our place, we would have made them come to take our place, we would have had them come to take our place.

Shownya Shamsideen to Neil Cohen.

D.W.: You know, the more I hear about my learned colleagues from the BUD construction, the more I am convinced that the idea of the BUD construction is to give the students more power. And I think that we have the power to make sure that we get that power. And I think that we have the power to make sure that we get that power. And we need to use that power to make sure that we get that power.

A.M.: If you ask a question, I would be glad to give my opinion on it.

of 1992 to determine the school's ideal of what we've implemented their suggestions?

A.M.: Middle States is the organization that came down to check for the accreditation. They have never had to do it with the school itself. And if they can't control the way they make the school, we as students can only do what we can do. We can't control the school, and suggest the changes that need to be made.

A Poor Way To Lead a Takeover

The Baruch Day Student Government has once again tried unsuccessfully to contain a tuition hike protest at the college. The protest which was supposed to take place on April 11th had to be abandoned with the number of DSOG. Aside from their paranoid schizophrenia the Baruch DSOG is the biggest, government but all control over the students at Monday's protest. Students took over the 23rd St. building at the Lexington Ave. entrance, not letting other students in or out. Then they proceeded to enter the building and blockade the stairway. Students were stuck in the stairwell unable to exit or enter. Protectors then started hanging on the windows with their bags and the fire alarm was set off. (Do to maintain the water balloons they dropped and the chair that flew through a window. What kind of college student government buildings is this?) When confronted with the protectors’ behavior while it was going on, members of the DSOG thought they were being protected by the administration by saying, “We had nothing to do with it, we’re not responsible.” Agree. They’re being very responsible.

In the future, the DSOG should exercise control over Palladium Concert Doesn’t Add Up

What rests students $17,000, featured unknown entertainers, entertained me, and was the biggest flop not perpetrated by the Day Session Student Government? Give up? It was Super Dog Mind, compliments of the Student Activities Board.

Super Jam 91, the Palladium concert sponsored by the SAB and the Evening Session Student Assembly, was a colossal waste of student funds. The SAB should have taken the $17,000 and given it to the students who threw $8,000 in student funds into the East River last semester and throw it all into one event that by its very nature says he was satisfied with the outcome of the event. But when we look at how he refused to see the multitude of warning signs that came from every direction, and at the SAB members’ obliviousness to put a stop to this, we wonder whether anyone involved saw this coming. Determination is one thing, but mismanagement is another. And when you take that budget that was intended to have events for all students throughout the semester and throw it all into one event, the very nature excludes students who don’t like that particular type of music or style of music or could not attend the event. In our opinion, seriously of the opinion of all of the people in the StudioTheater. And when you live in a budget is that intended to have events for all students throughout the semester and throw it all into one event, you have a large group of people the DSOG and the SAB must admit to this.

We recommend that each member of the SAB and the DSOG rush at their earliest convenience to the Baruch Bank and pick up some of these tickets. They must be delivered to the DSOG before it is too late to just attend a concert they paid for in the first place. This is serious mismanagement.

What's Up With The Men in Blue?

By Vincent Britton Gillis

The recent outbursts of police brutality, which resulted in a couple of deaths, has sparked a lot of discussion about the way in which the public views the police. I don't think that there is necessarily any reason for an individual to all of the sudden have a negative view of the police force. The uniform does not give them away, it is kind of sad. I hope that we have not gotten away from the personal contact that comes with cops walking a beat. This was not the first time and it will not be the last. I hope that the uniform will provide some comfort to people who are suffering from the stresses of their jobs.

The following are their responses:

Debra Gregg is a 30 year old black woman who lives in Staten Island. Here are his responses: 1) "In trying to separate the events of the past few weeks from the normal, I have noticed that there is a significant difference. The police are not overly aggressive or confrontational. They are simply doing their job.

With this recent outburst of police brutality, which resulted in a couple of deaths, many people have changed their views about the police force.

Amerizan does not start rending its equal justice mark, the recent outbreak in police brutality is relatively sad. While I understand that the police officer is storing it in that way, the police force has gotten away from the personal contact that comes with cops walking a beat. This was not the first time and it will not be the last. I hope that the uniform will provide some comfort to people who are suffering from the stresses of their jobs.

April 8 - 12

By Lawrence Chiu

This year's Asian Week celebration was held on April 8-12. Events such as the opening ceremony, arts and craft workshops, photo exhibit, movies, food fair, and evening show were held around the campus. The main event of the celebration was the evening show on April 11 in the auditorium of 17 Lexington Ave. Although the show started a little late, it was a great success.

The evening show began with Chinese lion dancers coming down the aisles to the beats of the drum and gong. The dancers performed a second lion dance when they reached the stage. In addition, the show consisted of Filipino, Taiwanese, Indian, and Vietnamese dances. Chinese shadow plays, music, dance and Japanese Kabuki were also performed. Guest speaker for the night was Wilson Shum, president of the DSSG. But the special attractions of the evening show were the three-part fashion regatta and Master Lee, the stand-up comedian. The fashion show displayed international styles, such as Malaysian fashions and progressive ones. Students and guests were impressed by the model's performances. All the modeling was done by BardJIT students. The comedian was great as he kept the audience continually laughing for nearly a half hour.

For those students that missed this year's celebration, look out, because we will be back next year!
Before anything else, I have to thank you all for your tremendous response to the claim. Letters with your comments and suggestions are filling our office, and so there is nothing left to do but give you what you want. You want reviews of the new game? I’ll do it! The reason the game is so challenging? Well, we got two — or at least we thought we did. But alas, as one would expect. More importantly, however, he will attempt to colonize the like medicine and EMPD power. United Earth has developed chance at success. But wait. There is nothing left to do but lone man is sent on a mission to the distant future. Our Low Gravity Man can jump to beat Metorilla in sector 16. Ticker Perspectives

The purpose of Hispanic Week is to share with the Baruch community a celebration of Hispanic culture and diversity, and to offer networking and professional development opportunities for students and professionals. The event is open to all students, faculty, and staff, and it aims to foster understanding and appreciation of Hispanic culture and traditions.

Red Hot Fashions
At The Red Zone
By Massimo Salerno

It's spring again, and the time for "blow out" fashions has arrived. The Red Zone is presenting its second annual fashion show. This time the theme is "Fashion Takes on the World." If you're at last year's show and knew it was something special, then you know that this one will be even more exciting.

The show will consist of over 35 designers, including挖掘时尚设计、法国设计、意大利设计等。The Red Zone is the only intercultural organization that celebrates the contributions of both Hispanic and African-American cultures. It is made possible by the work and efforts of the Hispanic Club's student volunteers.

Development and Family Advisor to ease the concerns of the students and families. "But I think that the transition is not going to be easy," she said. "I think that the students and families will need a lot of support and guidance during this process. I think that the students and families will need to be prepared for the challenges that they will face during this transition."
IVAN LINS

Awa Yio
Produced by Stewart Levine & Larry Williams
Reprise Records
RATING: ***

By Kathryn Garcia

For its fascinating Brazilian music set to a poignant story, I recommend this album; the only drawback is that Lins sings in Portuguese.

The rhythms and feelings in this album are very Brazilian, and the instruments are all hand-made, which maintain the purity of the music which reflects Brazilian music in a pop context. The title of the album, Awa Yio, is an African expression which means "We Go," symbolic since the album is composed of songs that ask about the future of Brazil and the world. Ivan Lins has combined the folkloric music of Brazil with very contemporary music styles. It can be compared to the album Brazil by the Manhattan Transfer for which Lins offered some material.

In the past Lins has worked with pop legend Quincy Jones on various occasions. Jones has used several of Lins' compositions for other artists as well as himself, such as the track "テンペスト" of his Grammy award winning album Back On The Block. In Awa Yio, Ivan Lins' bold vocal and composition. The eleven songs that comprise the album are a result of fifteen years of learning and working with the folkloric music of Brazil, and all eleven songs represent music styles from different regions of Brazil. The meaning of the songs and Brazil's social and musical treasures involved become the worth the price of the album alone.

And even if you can't understand what the musical treasures involved is the Ensemble for which Lins offered some material.

And even if you can't understand what the musical treasures involved is the persons he has written along with Tina and songwriter. The eleven songs that were co-written by Stewart. It's usually three or four on an album of 12 tracks.

The rhythms and feelings in this album are very Brazilian, and he decided to sing in Portuguese to maintain the purity of the music which he loves. This album; the only drawback is that Billboard chart.

Three of the most impressive original tracks are "Bela, Hot," which may well be the second single off the album. The song is filled with Stewart's classic view of the stages. But the best part of Vagabond Heart, is any other Rod Stewart album for that fact, in the traditional tracks. And believe me, these six have got their booking bars on, getting ready to clamp that Billboard chart.

One With Heart And Mind

How a Non-Profit Boston Agency Prepares Massachusetts' Future Workers

By Erin Lepole

Jim Williams had a long way to go before he could call McDonald's headquarters. And now he had to stand and represent the mostly Asian populace of his neighborhood. He is a friend of a friend, who is a high school student in a communications course, and he has come to point out the issues that matter to him.

"We want to make sure that people are treated equally," said Ms. van Duyne, who has been working at the Boston Public Library for the past 15 years. She has been a part of the city's social services system and is now working at One With One, a non-profit organization that helps refugees and immigrants find jobs.

But despite her success, van Duyne did not believe that her work was enough. "To teach someone English and help them get a job, I believe is one thing, but to help them find a place in society, to become a part of the community, that's another matter."

Van Duyne's grandmother introduced her to the library and matched her to a volunteer. "And as a volunteer, I've been able to make a difference in people's lives," she said.

But van Duyne also knows that more needs to be done. "We need to do more to help the refugees and immigrants who come to the city. We need to help them find jobs, but we also need to help them find a place in society."

Van Duyne's volunteer work has not been without its challenges. "There have been times when I've been frustrated," she said. "But I've always been able to find a way to help people."
Baseball Team Wins Its First-Year After 9 Losses

By David A. Amir

How does it feel to be playing centre field for the first time? "It’s a lot of fun," says first baseman John Johnson. "I’m having a good time out here."

The team has been working hard to improve its play. "We’ve been working on our defense," says coach Dan McGee, "and we’re getting better every game."

The next game is against University of Connecticut. "We’re looking forward to the challenge," says Johnson. "We want to win this game."
