Ticker Writer Injured In Car Crash

By Mohua Mukhopadhyay

Shameek Supreme Allah, Baruch College junior and staff writer for The Ticker, experienced a night he will remember for the rest of his life.

At approximately 11:15 p.m. on December 12, 1992, Shameek, along with his friend Andy Khon, were on their way from Flatbush, Brooklyn to Bed-Stuy to pick up Andy’s father. Kohn, driving his father’s Nissan Minivan with Shameek in the passenger seat, was traveling in the left lane of the West Side Highway when suddenly, his car crossed the service road made a U-turn and ended up right in front of Shameek’s car. In order to prevent a collision with the other car, Khon swerved left and hitting the divider and hitting a lamp post.

In the crash both of Shameek’s knees and thighs were broken and therefore could not walk. Shameek crawled to the divider to get away from the on-coming traffic. As Kohn called the police, Shameek lay on the ground near the car, while being aided by an off-duty fireman. Shortly afterwards the police and Emergency Medical Service arrived on the scene. Shameek and Kohn were rushed to St. Vincent’s Hospital.

For the next two weeks, Shameek remained in the hospital, undergoing treatment for broken bones. Kohn received treatment and was released from the hospital five days later. In order to reset the thighbone two metal rods were inserted in the lower part of Shameek’s right leg. The rods remained in his right leg for approximately four days. On December 15th, 1992, Shameek had two operations simultaneously. The first operation was performed on his left knee cap. Metal wires were placed around his knee cap in order to help the healing process. The second operation was for his right leg. A metal rod was inserted which ran from his hip to his knee. A nail of about 2 inches long was placed horizontally through his thigh to support the metal rod and help the bones heal.

“Not the three days after the operations, I felt the wires, staples and rods being inserted in me. I also felt the doctors cutting me and my muscles inside me moving. I felt all that for three days,” says Shameek. His left leg was put in a cast in order to make sure that his knee cap healed properly.

After the operation, the doctor told Shameek that his knee cap would never completely heal. His knee cap had broken into so many small pieces that the doctor had to remove some of those small pieces. If his knee cap did not heal properly, then they would either put an artificial one in or not do anything at all.

Both Shameek and Kohn have made tremendous progress in the past few weeks. Kohn has recovered almost except for occasional chest pains. As for Shameek, his left leg is still in a cast and he experiences occasional pain and stiffness of the muscles. Shameek is there undergoing physical therapy. “I am making real good progress and I am happy that my doctor told me [was possible]. I estimate that by March, both of my legs will be more flexible and by the end of March, flexible enough not to use crusties,” says Shameek.
Talking With The President: An interview with Simon Herelle

Simon Herelle: Please explain your reaction to the information complete in cost sharing and Street Fair.

SH: I had problems with the news piece. Which, besides not having a headline, it was very unclear. I think some of the part student leaders were interested in, the first issue of students who attended full-time, dual issues are influenced significantly their student life. So, I think we have a lot of staff issues, some staff, those are going to be those that we are interested in, the total general population and it's our responsibility to maintain that relationship. We all know that we work in number crunching. We know that we are all technocrats. We all work in number crunching.

The administration has passed out a survey concerning club hours and allowable sharing during the academic year. Can you tell me what you thought of the survey?

SH: I guess we are referring to the survey that was put out by Institutional Research and Office of Vice President for Student Affairs. And it was a survey that is generally in the Spring to quantitatively analyze student interest in student life and student leadership on our campus. So, five to ten percent of the students who attended full-time, dual issues are influenced significantly their student life.

I, personally, have some $5,000 to $8,000 for the event. Street Fair is a very strategic to the experience that students here, come, participate in, and we are ahead of the game. Once we get that information back by the time it is happening that we go about doing this is that we can guide the Rubin and council are addressing various issues of what is going to happen to programming which was being done. These things are proven, what the benefits of these groups? I think that is the argument that is going to be made in the referendum on the ballot for the event. We need 50 signatures. So, how many of people interested in club hours, really have some $5,000 to $8,000 for the event from the Auxiliary Enterprises in the internal. That means you have 4,500 people interested in club hours. They have no interest in seeing our club hours. They have no interest in seeing their club hours reduced to full-time, day are interested in student life. I have a lot of problems with the survey in that it is trying to quantitatively analyze student interest in student life and student leadership on our campus. So, five to ten percent of the students who attended full-time, dual issues are influenced significantly their student life.

FRESHMAN SEMINAR STUDENT LEADERS

WANTED: Freshman Seminar Leaders! Fall 1993/Spring 1994

Department of Student Development & Counseling

RM: People have been asking me about different things. One of them is appointment to committees you were supposed to advise. I have heard that the president made an appointment because he had chosen someone. For which committee? Can you explain this?

RM: This has been totally misunderstood. The position that is being referred to is the Board of Directors position for the College Association to which Dr. Lass was appointed in the Fall Semester of '92. It is not my discretion to fill that position. It is an elected position. That position is supposed to be on the ballot and filled during the election. So one commented on this. There was only one person (Melanie Garcia) who ran for the Board of Directors position in '91, who was recommended by the office of Student Development and was not appointed, but had, had latitude to appoint candidates from the applications (to the Board) which was an appointment by the Board of Directors. The Board of Directors says you must appoint someone who is an elected member.

RM: You have appointed someone to the position of Vice President for the Board of Directors to fill the position in the Fall Semester. If the position is supposed to be on the ballot then they must be an elected member.

RM: The third turn out voted to be a real problem because of the way they were elected and how they were appointed by the office of Student Development is the way we will have a legitimate possibility of substituting jackets for their numbers. No big deal. That is the good policy. I think it is a fair policy. People normally come here every club hour or every month of the semester. If we don't have the same degree of probability, they know they are not getting the subsidy, that they are paying the actual costs times what they have the subsidy. I think that is a fair policy. The position is supposed to be on the ballot and filled during the election.

RM: The position that is being referred to is the Board of Directors position to which Sylvia Lam was appointed in the Fall Semester, which is being referred to is the Board of Directors position on which I think is being very stupid and confusing. It is a Board of Directors position. I don't think it is being very stupid and confusing. I don't think it is very stupid and confusing. I don't think it is very stupid and confusing.
So many things come with a lifetime warranty. At TIAA, we want you to be one of them. That's why we created Group Life and Long-Term Disability Insurance for the educational community. These plans can provide additional financial security as well as outstanding benefits like paycheck protection, continued contributions toward retirement, Social Security assistance, and expert claims service.

To find out more about how you can give yourself the best lifetime protection, call your benefits office and ask about us. At TIAA, we think everyone should be guaranteed for life.

The Dirt on “Grunge”

By Chanise Thorpe

The fashion industry has outdone itself this time. It seems that designers have been desperate to create a trend that’s indiscriminately stylish that was around already. They call it “grunge.”

What exactly is this “grunge” phenomenon? According to various magazines, (Vogue, Elle, Vanity Fair) when you dress, mismatching clothes, oversized layers, denim shirts, all black and every pair looking a must for this look.

It’s said that the “grunge” look supposedly evolved from the Seattle music groups such as Pearl Jam and Nirvana. Focus on them, I guess when I was growing up, soon after my Fender Stratocaster is missing. Can’t quite take this off. You mean, I’ve been a fashion plate even though I didn’t know it? All those times I walked down the street looking like a hobo. I was actually a fashion diva! I’ve been reborn. Instead of worrying and my head down, I should have been strutting my stuff. If this is the definition of grunge fashion, then I suppose all the homeless people will be surprised to learn that their与wearables are the latest rage! It’s about time. Effortless fashion at last. Come on, people, this is fashion. It’s not even a trend. I feel like getting dressed and throw on my thrift shop, not being a grunge. You’re being lazy, and that’s all there is to it. There’s nothing wrong with it either. This grunge thing seems like a reason for designers to tap into the market with a new line of items. The idea behind it is that they will probably

WELCOME TO HELL!

By Chanise Thorpe

I tried to be optimistic. It would be a piece of cake. Beginning for first little classes shouldn’t be a problem. Right? Wrong. I made the classic mistake of believing in the school system. But first, let’s backtrack to the beginning of my registration hell.

January 7

There’s a slight ease of panic sneaking through my body. I have not yet received my registration materials. Everyone else has. Could there be a problem? Vernon calls me up and tells me that there’s a problem, the registration has been delayed. However, I can get the problem fixed. I am a registered on the 15th-OK, no problem. Next on the line is the Hephaestus Assessment Office. Seems that I have to re-take the math skills test. It was given in December. That’ll all for the test in the 15th. I can still register on the 15th.

The Bursar in-charge tells me that I have to wait until the 13th. I am informed that I have to wait until the 15th. I am just informed that I have to wait until the 15th. I am called to the registration section, proceed, missed my classes aren’t closed.

6:38 p.m.

Closed. Closed. Closed. Yes, my previous optimism has just shattered like a pane of stained glass. Simple. Take a break and throw my classes together. No simple. With a point of her hand she tells me again that my classes are closed. The Bursar-in-charge tells me. I have to wait for the test results first. Damn! not even the registration utopia, I such luck. Once again, I get into the registration hell. classes. For the next two hours I ran through my body. Everyone else has. Could there be a problem? Vernon calls me up and tells me that there’s a problem, the registration has been delayed.

Good news! I have passed the test. It was given in December. They demands some payment. Yes! I can register on the 15th. OK, no problem. Next on the line is the Hephaestus Assessment Office. The first annual Freshman Orientation awards ceremony was held on January 12 to award 20 students who have worked in the Freshman Seminar program as student leaders.

Susan Anderson, the coordinator of HelpLine, began the ceremony by thanking all the students for their hard work and commitment in the Freshman seminar program for the Fall semester of 1992.

Anderson, in an interview after the ceremony, said that student leaders were the glue that kept students together and that the HelpLine has helped her to prepare for her new role as a peer counselor.

Where the Hell is Sports?

By Kevin Crespi

Yes, The Ticker does have a Sports section and Baruch does have sports teams. You might not have guessed it by reading The Ticker because there was no sports editor for the fall semester. That has changed now as I am the new sports editor. While we were away Baruch sports went on as usual, albeit without any coverage. The men’s sports teams: soccer, volleyball, basketball, tennis, baseball, and fencing and the women’s sports teams: volleyball, basketball, tennis, fencing, and cross country (track) played their regular schedule.

Along with covering the Baruch sports teams this section will try to keep the Baruch community updated on professional sports, sports events between clubs, and the different sport facilities offered at Baruch. Such are: the weight room, swimming pool, basketball and volleyball courts, as well as the physical education courses being offered.
