Baruch Gets New Grant Officer

Michelle A. Brews

After a two-year delay, Baruch has hired Andrew J. Grant as the Director for the Office of Grants and Contracts. He is replacing now Assistant Director, Elissa Cowanich, who has been serving since entering college, returning to graduate school, or starting a career

is often uncertain and intimidating.

There are two types of positions.

One is for people who have been in the field for a while. These people see this as an opportunity to receive new challenges.

The other is for people who are not yet in the field. These people see this as an opportunity to make new friends and experiences.

Alex, a 10-year-old student,
was walking through Washington Square Park when he was approached by a group of people from the BARUCH College Association. After researching Principles (CIIP),
he started asking me some pretty
interesting questions about life.

"I think we need a new
strategy for the BARUCH College
Association," he recalled.

Andrew J. Grant is now feeling it's time to move on. Associate Dean William Brown of Teachers College believe Grant has made a significant contribution to the college in the short time he was here.

"We're happy to see him go, but wish him well at BARUCH."

Keep on Walkin',
They Ain't Talkin'

The primary purpose of The Ticker is to inform the student population of Baruch College about events and issues relevant to their education. We pride ourselves on our robust news coverage. Unfortunately, it seems that a cloud of silence has appeared above Baruch. A news blackout of unprecedented proportions was caused by (get this) Columbus Day. It seems most of Baruch's administrators and professors were terribly backed up because of our day off. If The Ticker tried to use an excuse like that for missing our deadline, we'd be laughed at all the way to 18th Street.

"Ah," you may think, "but you're supposed to get around all of the zipped lips and get a story anyway.

That's true, but we try and provide you with the facts straight from the horse's (administrator's) mouth. We don't want to fabricate anything, and we don't want to give you a story full of speculation. So while we may look dry for news today, we would rather wait until something spectacular happens (and it will), and then dazzle you with all the facts. Our front page states, no news is indeed scary news.

Our wise administrators are being so hush-hush, hush means a storm's about to break and someone is going to get flooded. When it happens, we'll be right there. Our message to those of the tight lip variety is plain and simple. Enjoy the silence now. It may be your last opportunity.

Quote of the Fortnight

"...is insulting that it is Adams, a black and himself presuming to be the voice for the Hispanic community could make such a despicably racist and vicious statement." - by David Ortiz

We Aim to Please

To the Editor:
I enjoyed your editorial that appeared in The Ticker, September 22, 1993. I agreed with your opinion with respect to the fact that the t-shirt wearer is unable to truly articulate himself, so they have allowed a t-shirt to speak for them. However, I did not agree with the response of the grading for the 25-35 points. I think the article would have been more effective if the reader, who received 25-35 points and they owned the shirts, they needed to seek counseling immediately, and 25-35 points with no ownership had a significant awareness should say a prayer for the fellow human being because they need that and a whole lot more.

Thank you for your time and attention.

In a nation that reveals in its sense of nostalgia, African-Americans were heard to walk down memory lane in the form of an anniversary re-match on Washington. As opposed to the over 200,000 participants of the August 28, 1963 demonstration, an estimated 20,000 party goers found their way to the podiums on the thirteenth anniversary. Was this simply an opportunity for those who say African-Americans have arrived-no friends and family members living in the urban conditions and the quality of life in the black community as a whole are worse than ever and African-American thinkers and advocacy groups it is just that there is not a universal or even Disintegration, because people who are active working man, the Yankees and the people. "This exhibition displays numerous features about the Baruch College that I never knew before. The changes that Baruch went through were not always the best," one student remarked.

"I'm particularly interested in the history of the "Free Academy," which incorporated a new Baruch College Library, a Media Resources Lab, and a Computer Center. It will be available to the students in the Spring of 1994."

Are You In Junior Limbo?

By Galia Anderson

You've attended every class, done every homework assignment, and passed every test. You are ready to take the next step. But is that really true? You've probably heard of junior limbo - a time in the academic calendar when you are no longer a freshman and have not yet been accepted into the junior class. This is a time when you are in a state of limbo, waiting to be accepted into the junior class. This can be a challenging time, as you are neither a student in the junior class nor have you been accepted into any advanced classes.

Dr. Audrey Williams, the director of the School of Business, warns that the junior class is overburdened and students receive less attention. This is not science fiction; it is happening at Baruch College. If they register and are lucky, they are going to be there and posed registration, they are going to be enough to slip through the cracks at dropped," says Dr. Williams.

Guidance for the School of Business, Decibenedetto, Director of Curricular Guidance for the School of Business, urges students to seek a counselor at the office. This is not an easy task, as the office is open Monday-Thursday from 9:00 a.m.-7:00 p.m., and on Fridays from 9:00 a.m.-12:00 p.m. and 2:00 p.m.-5:00 p.m. No appointment is necessary if you see a counselor now, rather than waiting until you officially withdraw from any class. This is increasingly a problem for seniors who will be graduating in spring or summer semesters. In cases where they want or need to graduate, no appointment is necessary if they have everything they need to graduate, especially if they want to take a credit overload. Any student wishing to take a credit overload in Spring 94 must apply at the registrar's office by November 15, 1993.

Another important deadline to know is November 15, which is the last day to officially withdraw from any class. A grade of "W" will appear on your transcript, but this does not prevent you from re-registering. The last day to apply for reinstatement is December 1, 1993. RISTAR PICTURES presents

“RUDY”

Rudy, is the story of a spirited small-town boy living in the Midwest. Rudy, graduated from high school with mediocre grades, worked in the town’s steel mill, where all the other sons of the town also worked, and wanted to marry his childhood sweetheart. What makes Rudy so different from his family, friends, and whole environment is that he has a dream to go to college. Not any college but Notre Dame College. Once there, he will do anything he can to be on the Notre Dame football team. Though not always realistic, Rudy is obsessed and unrelentlessly persistent in making his dream. With the entire world against him, he will strive for his unattainable dream.

I have to say that this film is not what I expected. As soon as I saw the marketing materials for the film, I immediately thought I knew what was going to happen next. The film itself, however, turned out to be much different than I had expected. The story of Rudy Ruettiger's life is told in a way that is both heartwarming and inspiring. It is a story about perseverance, hard work, and dedication. Rudy's determination to make his dreams a reality is something that is truly令人感动.

From the actors to the director, everyone involved in the film has put their heart and soul into making it a success. The performances of the actors were outstanding, with their acting capturing the essence of the characters they were portraying. The director did an excellent job in bringing the story to life on screen, with his direction being both powerful and moving.

Overall, I would highly recommend this film to anyone who enjoys a good story about perseverance and determination. It is a film that will touch your heart and inspire you to follow your dreams, no matter how outrageous they may seem. Rudy Ruettiger's story reminds us that with hard work and determination, anything is possible. So, go out and see this film today! It is sure to be a movie that you won't forget.
Barleycorns are tons of fun, especially if you like a little punch on the dance floor. Irish songs are supposedly the funniest, but definitely not the best music. The Barleycorns' set lasted well into the evening. The Drovers, who don't have as much change to bring your Celtic fiddle music to the Uptown Comedy Club. More than likely the Barleycorns, with long hair, remainment of Port Authority, this concert series was the first time they'd become a visible force in the Irish music scene.

Looking at the little group with an arm, you could see that the Barleycorns were a bunch of musicians with an eternal spirit and some serious skills. Mike Kirkpatrick plays spacey guitar like no other, and the group always keeps their music on the edge. At times, the Barleycorns can be a little too mellow, but overall, they're a great band. Their original music is alternative rock with a country feel, and their cover of "Poor Paddy," a traditional Irish song, was a highlight of the night. They also played "Mr. MacGold" by The Young Folks, which is a close cousin to "Poor Paddy." Overall, the Barleycorns are a great band to see, especially if you're looking for a fun night out.

The Barleycorns' music is a mix of traditional Irish tunes with a modern twist. Their guitar work is fantastic, and they have a great sense of humor. The Barleycorns are a must-see for anyone who loves live music and a good time.

When it comes to the Barleycorns, there are a few things to keep in mind. They have a very loose dress code, and they often change their songs on the fly. So, if you're looking for a typical Irish music experience, you might be disappointed. However, if you're up for some fun and a good laugh, the Barleycorns are a great choice.

In conclusion, the Barleycorns are a fantastic band with a unique sound. Their music is a perfect blend of traditional Irish tunes and modern rock, and they always put on a great show. So, if you're looking for a night out with some Irish flavor, the Barleycorns are definitely worth a listen.
Goals, Spikes, Dunks- Narces Phonar Does It All

When it comes to sports in Baruch College, Narces Phonar, a twenty-two-year old native of Haiti is a jack of all trades. Along with being the co-captain of the soccer team, he is also a member of the men’s basketball team and a starter for the men’s volleyball team.

Phonar has gained popularity with both his peers and his coaches by being polite, softspoken, and always quick with a joke. Despite his reputation, basketball coach Ray Rankis describes him as being, “...hardworking and sincere. He is a natural, very bright. You never have to tell him twice about doing something, and he is very effective in whatever he does. He is soft spoken, but don’t let that fool you. He is very intense when it comes time to compete.”

Phonar has been on both the soccer and volleyball teams for the past four years. He has also been voted the Valuable Player for the past two years. After joining the basketball team a year ago, the school gave Phonar special recognition for actively participating in three sports. Soccer coach, Tony Harrington stated that, “He is very talented. He plays all positions and knows how to play all of them well.”

Because Phonar has played soccer since he was young, he prefers it over the other two sports. So serious is he about soccer that he “checked out” the team before he came to Baruch. “Baruch has a pretty good team then,” he said, “but they were never able to make it all the way. So I thought I was going to make the difference.” Unfortunately, his dream of making it all the way have yet to come true.

Sports may be important to Phonar, but he understands that it is not his first priority. “It is not the main objective,” he said, “I am here for an education, and sports come second. Sports just helps to keep me busy.” But he does complain about Baruch’s lack of facilities. “It is very frustrating, especially for soccer because you can’t practice. It’s a big difference when you practice in the gym than on a field.”

When Phonar is not in school or playing sports he stays busy working as a dispatcher for Grayline New York Tours. He is very grateful that his job offers a flexible schedule that makes this all possible.

Phonar, an international marketing major and plans to start his own business by age 29. “I get lots of ideas when I walk around my neighborhood (Flatbush),” he says, “car dealerships, clubs, and others.”

Consider going for a doctorate. Right now however, Phonar’s biggest concern is graduating from Baruch by 1996.

JORDAN AIRS OUT

On October 6, 1993, Michael Jefrey Jordan held a press conference to announce his retirement from the NBA. After nine years of playing professional basketball, three consecutive NBA championships, and seven straight scoring titles, the world’s most recognized athlete called for a time-out. Jordan handled his press conference with grace and humor, all typical of the man who has dominated basketball for almost a decade.

Jordan cited a lack of motivation for his decision. He said, “I just feel that I don’t have anything else to prove,” and added, “The desire just wasn’t there.” Are these the only reasons for his departure from the sport? Was there more behind what he was saying?

Maybe Michael Jordan was on the brink of burnout which was brought on by his coistant quest for privacy. How about the death of his father and the recurring questions about his gambling? Is he blaming himself for his father’s death? There has been speculation linking the murder of James Jordan to Michael’s gambling, but evidence has yet to be found.

Maybe Michael Jordan will stay away forever. Perhaps he will be one of the few athletes which leave sports fans with perfect memories. People will always talk about the “Elvis of sports.” Jordan is only thirty years old. He will get tired of playing golf 200 days out of the year, and then he will begin to hunger. Maybe he thought his gambling problems will go away if he went away. Only time will tell.

Many fans are quite disappointed by all this. An athlete of any caliber will encounter problems in his or her life. Does that mean they have to turn and walk away? There comes a time in everyone’s life when you have to reach down deep inside and pick yourself up off the floor. That is what a champion is made of. In the way athletes can inspire others to move onto bigger and better things are truly remarkable.

That is why they are professionals. That’s why they make huge salaries.

But, I need money.” He plans to concentrate on working in his field of study by next semester and start saving up money for his business. He is also certain that he will pursue a Master’s degree after graduating from Baruch, and even consider going for a doctorate. Right now however, Phonar’s biggest concern is graduating from Baruch by 1996.

In 1996, the Knicks will have won a championship for New York City. Kenny Anderson and Derrick Coleman will have come very, very close to winning it all. Shaq will have established himself as a force to be reckoned with, and Larry Johnson will have Charlotte in a frenzy. That’s when the kid from Wallace, N.C. will make his move and prove all the skeptics wrong again.
