York Security Head Resigns

Cites Abuse of Students' Rights

By Deirdre A. Russey

The Director of Security at York College resigned last June claiming City University Security Director, Joseph Elimelech, was establishing policies that would violate students' constitutional right to freedom of speech.

In his letter of resignation, Director of Security, Winston A. Burrows, Director of Security at York College for over 17 years, states that in a directors meeting in November of 1995, Elimelech and his deputy Martin Rodini proposed that a fee between $5,500 to $7,500 would be assessed to each campus whenever the SAFE Team is dispatched. This proposal, according to Burrows, was intended to give Elimelech control over who spoke on campuses.

This fee was proposed following the incidents during Black Solidarity Day at York College on November 6, 1995. Student leaders of the day had scheduled controversial speaker Khaled Muhammed. According to Burrows when Chancellor W. Ann Barlow was notified of this, then Acting President of the College, Dr. Thomas Minter was instructed to cancel the events of the day. The SAFE Team was then summoned to arrive on campus the morning of Black Solidarity Day to keep Muhammad off campus and permit only York College students to speak.

Students Demand Say On Hiring of Faculty

ESSA Claims Students Have No Voice

By Genna Kim

Student government leaders are moving forward with a proposal that would increase students' influence in the hiring and determination of tenure of Baruch faculty. The President of Evening Session Student Assembly (ESSA) believes student representation on the Personnel and Budget Committee-responsible for naming teaching positions-would provide a stronger academic environment and greater student participation.

Kyle George, ESSA president, maintains that this move coupled with additional measures will allow students to achieve greater academic and occupational success. Known as P&B, the Personnel and Budget Committee is a highly influential committee with no student representative at Baruch.

Career Services Revamped

By Helen McFarlane

Baruch's Career Services Center has been reorganized due to its poor performance in its primary area of responsibility: preparing students with the appropriate skills for finding employment. According to Samuel Johnson, Vice President of Student Development, in whose charge the Center has been placed since this past summer, reorganization was a must at Career Services because under previous leadership it had been "under-funded, undeveloped, and antiquated—not organized in a way to do business in the nineties."

The elimination of the status quo, by measuring success by the number of companies seeking out Baruch students as prospective employees, rather than concrete results, has been one major problem among many. Under Johnson's leadership, there is a new system in place, which is more focused on student preparation.

Responsibilities have been shuffled, and new personnel have been hired. Dr. Patricia Inimbio is the new director of the Career Development Center. She comes to the position with a Ph.D. in counseling psychology and has worked as a counselor at Baruch for over eight years. Dr. Richard Brody, who served as Director at Career Services, has been made Pre Professor of Career Development; he works with all student organizations, such as clubs and societies linked with a discipline.

Baruch Business Forums

Esteeled CEO Addresses Select Group of Students

By Ivanna Garibaldi

President Matthew D. Sliwka welcomed the students gathered at The University Club on November 13, 1996 for the first meeting of the college's new CEO Forum. This new group of students, which is the first in the nation, was created by the college to bring student leaders from all across the country together to meet with the CEO and discuss issues of concern to students.

The first meeting was held on November 13, one day after the college's president, Matthew D. Sliwka, announced his retirement. The forum was attended by a dozen students from across the country, including students from the University of California, Berkeley, New York University, and the University of Pennsylvania.

The forum is designed to provide a forum for students to voice their concerns and ideas to the CEO, and to provide the CEO with a direct line of communication to students. The forum will meet at least once a year, and will be open to all students who are interested in participating.

By Genna Kirn

Baruch Center for Student Development President Dennis J. Keating welcomed students to the first meeting of the campus-wide program called "Baruch Business Forums," which was held on November 13, 1996. The forums are designed to bring students together with business leaders to discuss issues of mutual concern.

The first forum was held on November 13, and was attended by a dozen students from across the country, including students from the University of California, Berkeley, New York University, and the University of Pennsylvania.

These staffs were eventually being paid to give students information and organize career-related events, as well as host on-campus recruiting. Johnson realized that when they should have been more training-oriented and have offered more counseling.

While one employee elected to retire even after most of the budget cuts had been rescinded, two more were later terminated. As Johnson explains, before this change of policy came from the governor's office, he had "already decided on reorganization for three very highly paid positions" as a means of compensating for budget cuts.

All college students at some point in their studies go through the experience of being taught by a bad professor and wind up not learning much from that professor. One should not be surprised when students are frustrated over the fact that such professors remain in tenure, while more effective pedagogues are dismissed from the college.

Out of this frustration among the Baruch student body, an initiative has developed, instigated by the leadership of the student governments, to include student representatives on the school's Budget and Personnel committees. While the students' voice on these committees would assist the student body in shaping its own education by determining which members of the faculty would be discharged and who would stay, the extent to which this voice would really play a role is questionable, since one or two votes on each of the committees do not constitute a majority. Members of the faculty and administration could readily outvote the students on every committee level, leaving students, who are most directly affected by personnel and budget decisions, with only nominal powers.

Instead of pursuing the futile cause of student representation on P&B, the leaders of the Baruchian governments ought to regroup their forces and focus more closely on battling for every cent in the state's budget for higher education, because, in the end, the quality of our education will depend upon how much money is available for its funding.

ETHNIC HOSTILITIES SET TO BRING BACK COLONIALISM

CAPITALISTS WILL PLUNGE AFRICA IN THE GUISE OF PEACE KEEPING

By Tony Bello-Gwah

The ethnic wars that have ravaged the Horn of Africa in recent years have exposed the deep divisions within Africa's post-colonial nations. These conflicts are often fueled by economic interests, political power struggles, and ethnic rivalries. The ethnic conflict in the Horn of Africa has had devastating effects on the region, leading to mass displacement, loss of life, and economic dislocation.

The Horn of Africa, which includes countries such as Ethiopia, Eritrea, Somalia, and Sudan, has been a region of conflict and instability for decades. The region has been shaped by European colonialism, which divided the region into artificial borders that do not reflect the natural ethnic boundaries of the region. This has led to ongoing ethnic tensions and conflicts, as each ethnic group seeks to assert its dominance.

The conflicts in the Horn of Africa are often fueled by economic interests. For example, the Ogaden War in Ethiopia was sparked by a dispute over control of the Otago oil fields, which are estimated to contain one billion barrels of oil.

In addition to economic interests, political power struggles also play a role in the ethnic conflicts in the Horn of Africa. For example, the war in Eritrea was sparked by a dispute over the control of the Eritrean Red Sea coast, which is a strategic location for both Ethiopia and Eritrea.

The ethnic conflicts in the Horn of Africa have had a profound impact on the region, leading to mass displacement, loss of life, and economic dislocation. The region needs a peaceful and stable environment to allow for economic development and human prosperity.

TALK TO ALL HISPANIC STUDENTS

By Angel Ramos

I want to talk to you about a club in Baruch that has participated in numerous events this semester. The club is the Hispanic Heritage Club, and it is a great way for Hispanic students to meet others and participate in events that celebrate Hispanic culture.

The Hispanic Heritage Club is a great way for Hispanic students to meet others and participate in events that celebrate Hispanic culture. The club has organized several events this semester, including a Hispanic Heritage Month celebration and a Hispanic Heritage Day event.

The club is open to all students, regardless of their background, and it is a great way for students to learn about Hispanic culture and meet others who share their interests. If you are interested in learning more about the Hispanic Heritage Club, please come to our next meeting or visit our website for more information.

What Motivates the U.S. Government To Finance Social Programs?

By Victoria Esposito

The U.S. federal government has historically invested in social programs to address poverty, healthcare, and education. These programs have been motivated by a variety of factors, including political pressure, public opinion, and economic necessity.

One of the main factors that motivates the government to finance social programs is the desire to address poverty and inequality. The government recognizes that poverty and inequality are significant problems that can have negative consequences for individuals and society as a whole.

Another factor that motivates the government to finance social programs is the desire to improve public health outcomes. The government recognizes that access to healthcare is essential for maintaining a healthy population.

Finally, the government also recognizes the importance of providing education opportunities to all children. The government believes that education is essential for promoting economic mobility and social cohesion.

Even though the federal government has historically invested in social programs, there are ongoing debates about the extent of government intervention and the allocation of resources. These debates reflect the complex and dynamic nature of social programs and the challenges of achieving effective and sustainable solutions.
What Motivates the U.S. Federal Government To Finance Social Programs?

The urgency of confronting the problem of welfare fraud has been in increasing demand for the federal government to finance social programs. The consensus among economists and policymakers is that welfare programs are a major cause of the nation's fiscal imbalance.

New Referendum Proposed to Protect the Rights of Students

Special To The Ticker

At the first meeting of the College Republicans, Kevin Degidion, member of the National Republican College Republicans, presented a comprehensive referendum which will forever preserve, protect and defend the rights of the students at Baruch

College. The, "Contract for American Students" has been gaining popularity quickly and in being considered by students at prestigious schools such as WVU and Columbia, among others. The Contract will protect the rights of Baruch students from infringement by the faculty and the student government.

Degidion was inspired to write the Contract for American Students when CUNY LaGuardia legally shut down the student newspaper, The Bridge, and prevented students from finding out that their Student Activities Fees were being squandered by the Student Government on trips. Degidion and The Bridge editor-in-chief Joe Smith took LaGuardia to court and won.

Each section of the Contract will save students money and reduce corruption. Section I consists of Student Activities Fees

by 35 percent. The Student Activities Fees is paid by every student each semester to support Baruch's clubs. In effect, much doing this money, desperately needed by some students, is just taken without the student's knowledge. The Student Activities Funds will be used to support Baruch's clubs and activities.

The Student Government will be required to provide a list of all Student Activity Funds and how they are being used.

Section III states "no speechless codes or other restrictions of communications shall be imposed on any student or organitation." This is very important because history has shown that as soon as an issue becomes controversial, colleges act quickly and efficiently to silence the students.

Section IV ensures that no classes will ever be held on nationally recognized religious holidays and that all religious symbols and rituals (which are not in violation of the law) on campus are to be recognized as freedom of religion.

Section V strikes deep in the hearts of every student. It besides states that there will be a student and faculty review board which will be selected randomly (by computer) to judge whether or not a student's grade is based on bias against his or her political beliefs rather than on actual performance. Baruch currently has no appeals system comprised of faculty members and students appointed by the Student Govnernment. The appeals process would be much fairer if the judges were chosen randomly.

The last section specifically protects the rights of students to smoke. Student smokers are treated like the lowest class of criminals by society and by colleges. The Student Smokers

Rights Act guarantees all students and faculty a designated smoking area. This is an issue because it is getting too cold for students and faculty to always leave campus to smoke in the classroom.

The College Republicans will soon be sponsoring a forum to find out the exact problems

Baruch students need adressed. The results of this forum will be used to draft the actual version of the Contract for American Students. Following is a brief summary of the standard Contract. If you would like to make suggestions, ask questions or have your club emporto the forum, please call the hotline at 516-629-2844.

Frequently asked questions about submitting a resume:

Q How long should my resume be?
A Your resume should be ONE PAGE.

Q WHERE and WHEN can I get help with my resume?
A Come into the office on the 8th floor of the 25th Street Building and have your resume reviewed (not mandatory but suggested). Walk in Resume Reviews take place Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays from 4:00 PM to 6:00 PM. Other times make an appointment.

Q How many resumes do I need?
A Plan to submit one resume for each company in which you are interested plus three for our office files.

3. Check the On-campus Recruiting Calendar posted in the office frequently (at least once per week) since companies are being continuously added. The calendar containing a list of all the firms scheduled to recruit Baruch students during the semester will be posted on the bulletin boards located in Room 820 in the 25th Street building. Consult the calendar to determine which companies interest you. You can usually obtain information about these companies in the office.

4. Keep a list of recruiting dates for companies to which you have submitted resumes. You should check the bulletin board weekly to see if your name appears on a Selections List for an interview with your chosen company. Lists appear two weeks before the scheduled date of the interviews.
Leadership weekend 1996 was very well attended and according to the participants, was very inciteful and informative. It was also a lot of fun, thus maintaining its duality of work and play.

Re-Curve: British Band Reunites for EP

By Syed A. Bokhari

The British duo Curve is back, after breaking up at the end of 1993, with a new album in the works. And though they have yet to achieve commercial success here in the states, back in Europe, they've already had five top 40 singles and two top 10 albums. Formed in 1988, Curve was one of the first bands to combine rock and electronic music, and they've gained a loyal following among fans of alternative rock.

In 1991, the Love of Tony Halliday and Dean Garcia crossed paths again. They were both members of the rock band, Smashing Pumpkins, and they reconnected when they started working on their solo albums. After the breakup of Curve, Tony formed Cold, and Dean formed Halo, but they kept in touch and decided to reunite for a new album.

Barbra Streisand returns with another intense look at love that can only satisfy one type of person: a Barbra fan! "The Mirror Has Two Faces" will sustain non-Barbra fanatics for the first hour or so, but there will be a few hours to go before you will grow weary of the constant speeches on beauty and self-esteem and the suffocating laughter of Barbra fans will make you extremely nauseous. Can you tell I'm speaking from experience?

"The Mirror Has Two Faces" follows the story of Rose Morgan (Barbra Streisand), a professor of English literature at Columbia University, and her relationship with a fellow Columbia professor, Gregory (Jeff Bridges). Gregory decides that sex is too distracting and wants a relationship with Rose that is not based on sex. Rose wants sex, among other things. She has a lot of just sex to deal with her lonely existence and her mother's cruel remarks. For both, deeper things are at work.

Initially, I thought I couldn't care for Barbra's self-deprecating jokes but they are funny and aren't so hard but laugh. Streisand is still a fine actress and can deliver lines as well as anyone. The problem lies in an overall script.

Richard LaGravenese's script ends up becoming a bunch of self-affirming speeches pouring into a movie. After the predictable beauty makeover Rose undergoes, each scene and piece of dialogue is designed to establish Rose's newfound love for herself. Yet, at the end of the film, Gregory tells her that she lacks sex because he loved her all along. So what was the point of the makeover? It looks so insignificant, why did I spend an hour watching a woman who hated herself because of her looks?

What I really meant was that there are moments in the film when there are statements about modern conceptions of beauty and how movies, in particular, always portray the same storybook endings that portray the typical notion of romantic love, yet the film ends this way. A typical ending where the woman with no self esteem gets a makeover, finds out she really does like herself and gets the man of her dreams.

I'm not saying for ruining the ending of "The Mirror Has Two Faces" for you Barbra fans, but this movie typifies "half as." it's completely bad because the film is not based on sex. It's genuinely entertaining for the first half. Streisand has a wonderful charismatic screen presence and is backed by a very strong cast. Her direction displays a good sense of timing and good pacing. It's truly a shame that the message in this film is corrupted by the modern conceptions that it tries so hard to denounce and we end up seeing a hypercritical film that can only satisfy the members of the audience who are blinded by Barbra Streisand's talents.

The best hip hop this year has been traditionally perceived as the most hip hop of all. However, the recent rise of the hip hop world has meant that there are many outstanding artists who are not well known. For example, Jeru the Damaja, with his album "Back to the World," has become the hottest hip hop artist in the country, garnering attention from fans and the music industry alike.

In 1991, with superb works like "Ransom," the album has become the hottest hit in the country, garnering attention from fans and the music industry alike. The album has sold millions of copies worldwide, becoming the best-selling hip hop album of all time.

The album "Ransom" tells the story of the past and present in hip hop music. The album has become the hottest hit in the country, garnering attention from fans and the music industry alike.

Kindred Words
One cannot find love for love will find you.
Life is like opening a series of boxes,
If you stop, you’ll never know what you could have received.
One does not deserve in love,
If one cannot love itself,
Smiles are reflections of one’s own soul.
Love is both a flaw and strength.
There is no life in sadness only squalor.
You can peek at all the broken pieces of a heart, but you can never reweave the window.
Love is the final emotion in being fully whole.
Metaphors in poems to listeners.
Cherish the present, for there may be no future in words.
When it happens in love without a shining star
Together, they are forever destined.
Love both the creation and destruction.

-Kiro The Invisible Samurai

A Babe Named Candee
A girl named Candee.
She’s my perfect skin candy.
A girl named Candee.
Finer than wine, better than brandy.
Oh sweet Candee!
Your better than Rambis!
I just love her cotton candy.
She’s my passion fruit
Because she’s as cute.
Oh sweet Candee!
You’re faster than Mandy!
I’ll kiss her till I’m blue.
Because I’m hooked on her Mountain Dew.
Oh sweet Candee!
You last longer than Sandy!
I’ll always be your handy man.
Nothing could make me as dandy.
Oh sweet Candee!
I’m going to leave Sandy.

-The Kavaler

There She Was
There she was standing all alone waiting for whom she was known.
I had to meet her, so I approached, hoping she wouldn’t crush me like a peach.
Not knowing what to say,
I asked her for the time.
I didn’t mean to stare, it’s just you’re so pretty.
I couldn’t help but notice you.
She finally smiled, what a beauty!
I had to ask her out, it’s my duty,
as a gentleman so what do you say?
Can I take you out to dinner?
Thinking for a while, finally said yes.
She made my day, what else can I say.
Like an angel I want possess, you take him, then caress and you touch with fineness.
Kiss you softly and sweep you off your feet.
Hold you tight and feel your heartbeats.
After that do it all over again.
Then I wake up from my sleep.

Snicker Bar
A candy bar is what I’ll be,
A “sucker” bar for me.
Chewy coating is portrayed with a caramel nutty filling in how it’s made.
I hold it in my hands
as the chocolate slowly melts.
The sweet caramely smell of buttery chocolate I devour.
That could go on and on, like an energizer bunny, for hours and hours.

As I take it closer to my lips,
The chocolate extremely chews.
My mouth gets around
As I slowly pull the wrapper down.
My tongue has this tingling feeling I never felt before.
Like it was the first piece of candy I’ve been waiting for.
I take a nibble at a time,
Because all of it is mine mine mine.
I taste the caramel, as sweet and dandy.
My mouth rips around.
As I take the bite
I see the caramel stretch so far that it can’t light.
The nutty filling incredibly delicious
It makes me feel, so so vivacious.

As I groaned to best off the caramel
My mouth and heart ALL just fell.
I never realized that you can do this to me.
To create something that makes me weak in the knees.
I want you everyday more and more.
WOW, this caramel anyone can admire.

-Jeannie Ng

The Quiet
Shh... listen...
What do you hear?
Can you hear the earth?
The swish of the leaves,
the chirping of the birds,
the ripple of the water.
Do you hear it?

No, I hear the quiet...
Be patient, listen harder.
What do you hear?
Can you hear life?
The patter of feet,
the laughter bubbling within you,
the clapping of hands in joy,
the beat of a healthy heart.
Do you hear it?

No, I hear the quiet...
What, how can you hear the quiet?
I hear the sound of destruction.
The sound of barren, dry lands,
all of nature killed by pollution.

Do you hear it?

No, I hear the quiet...
How can you hear the quiet?
I hear the sound of death.
The muting of feet forced into silence,
the suppression of breath.
"the Master,"
the ashes of the "unassailable" as they are shone by the mighty, the stillness of the heart as it is torn out of a mother’s womb.

Just try, listen a little harder!

No, I’ve heard it all before.
I hear the quiet...

-Shiji Chacko

It's everywhere you want to be.
By Ari Hirsch

Before this season gets even more frustrating, I'd like to make a suggestion to Jeff Van Gundy. Why not take a trip to Thanksgiving? Perhaps, if they continue to travel in a game, let them play in the turkey and yams around the table. I mean, that's what other coaches are doing to make their teams better.

The Knicks are 8-5 since the Atlantic Division. But anyone new to the game of basketball or basketball history knows that they are the worst 8-5 team ever. The record means nothing.

Losing in Philadelphia twice and being humiliated in Charlotte last week is worse than a team that has a $10 million dollar payroll. Stars can slip and slide, acting like a fool all they want. But if the Knicks can't control their turnover rate, their volatility means nothing. Most turnovers have clearly been the Knicks biggest problem. Lying to the 8-5 record over and over. It seems like the Knicks are constantly being pumped of players and ball and handing it to the opposition. They own the mistakes over and over.

By Eric Wright

All right, I've had to say "I told you so" but, "I told you so." You know the Knicks are starting to realize that not only are the Knicks bad but, they are short on chemistry, and they are constantly being bumped of players and ball and handing it to the opposition. They own the mistakes over and over.

Journey Statesman's star hopes for quick return

Gerald Thomas cannot wait for the moment when he will bring the ball into the basket court wearing the blue and white of Baruch. The leading scorer for Baruch for three years, Thomas was made available to provide his scoring punch, last season because of a point assignment for one season as a head coach at Middlesex University in London.

This year, Thomas has been back and looking forward to the sport that he claims has been a great sport for him. This is the same sport that he's played and improved for the last five years.

All that will have to wait as the season is so long, the team is so young, and the team is not yet ready to score. Thomas will be able to bring the ball into the basket court wearing the blue and white of Baruch. Thomas will be able to bring the ball into the basket court wearing the blue and white of Baruch.

With the first game of the season being played, Thursday, November 26th against Mt. St. Mary’s, Coach Christian has prepared his players whatever adverse situations that they may face. The team has not yet been fully prepared for the season in scoring.

If we recall last season, the Knicks went through a major turnover in players in the 1992-93 season. That’s when they went through the likes of Allen Iverson, Der Waller, and Thomas. The only problem with the Knicks is that they can score that saw this team is chemistry. Chemistry is what the Knicks don’t have.

By Ming Wong

Where is the state of sports headed to? Albert Belle gets $11 million, 18 home runs and 94 RBIs. Allen Iverson gets $10 million, 10 home runs and 25 RBIs. Richard Langhorn gets $18 million, 10 home runs and 45 RBIs. In the past five years and 200 games, the Knicks don’t have.

The biggest winner in the NFL, Ricky Watters, is another who is giving professional sports a bad name. Watters, another player that is a great enigma, like Belle. There is no doubt that Watters is one of the premier backs in the league, but he’s not a leader and he’s a one-dimensional player. I see no future for Watters.

The Baruch Poll: In my opinion, Watters is playing a few more round-trippers the past five years, 100, than anyone else. His 562 RBIs in the past five years is one of the most surprising activities, no one would complain. I deserve the money because of his tremendous talent with a ball and a bat.

Coach Christian

With the first game of the season being played, Thursday, November 26th against Mt. St. Mary’s, Coach Christian has prepared his players whatever adverse situations that they may face. The team has not yet been fully prepared for the season in scoring.

If we recall last season, the Knicks went through a major turnover in players in the 1992-93 season. That’s when they went through the likes of Allen Iverson, Der Waller, and Thomas. The only problem with the Knicks is that they can score that saw this team is chemistry. Chemistry is what the Knicks don’t have.

Where is the state of sports headed to? Albert Belle gets $11 million, 18 home runs and 94 RBIs. Allen Iverson gets $10 million, 10 home runs and 25 RBIs. Richard Langhorn gets $18 million, 10 home runs and 45 RBIs. In the past five years and 200 games, the Knicks don’t have.

The biggest winner in the NFL, Ricky Watters, is another who is giving professional sports a bad name. Watters, another player that is a great enigma, like Belle. There is no doubt that Watters is one of the premier backs in the league, but he’s not a leader and he’s a one-dimensional player. I see no future for Watters.

The Baruch Poll: In my opinion, Watters is playing a few more round-trippers the past five years, 100, than anyone else. His 562 RBIs in the past five years is one of the most surprising activities, no one would complain. I deserve the money because of his tremendous talent with a ball and a bat.

with a resounding 74-54 win over SUNY purchase. Off guard Joe Liberato led all scorers with 31 points.

The Statesmen dominated the game, both offensively and on the boards, outrebounding Purchase by 12, 45 to 33.

Baruch went on a 10-0 run in the first five minutes, and didn’t look back from there. Baruch was ahead the entire game by double digits, and the closest the game got was at the 14:15 mark of the second half, when the lead was cut down to 13 points. After that, Baruch cruised to a 22 point victory.

This was surprising, considering the disadvantage in height that Baruch will face all season. Liberato was constantly driving to the hoop, and scoring with great success. Coach Rankis said of Liberato, “Joe makes things happen,” and that he did on Friday night. Not only did he pace the team with 31 points, but he also added 7 rebounds and 5 steals.

In a fast paced sport such as basketball, time is of the essence. Time is a problem for the Baruch Women’s basketball team; the players just do not have enough of it. Most work, and all are full time students, but adversity is nothing new to Coach Susan Christian. They went 6-11 last year with half of the roster injured. “Many times we couldn’t even substitute,” says Coach Christian.

Out of Parson School of Design, Coach Christian did not play any college basketball herself because this is a new team for the most part. There are only three seniors on this team. “You can’t feel like a team unless you come to practice five days a week,” says Coach Christian. She expresses dismay that all her players do not know each other. She believes communication is a big part of the game. “We have to love each other,” she says half jokingly.

Although the team has been in jury free so far, the upcoming season promises to bring even more adversity. Elizabeth Bracero, a 5 foot 8 inch freshman guard out of Aquinas High School has already dropped off the team because of school and work commitments. Coach Christian was counting on her to be a key player this year; she says that Bracero reminds her of Emma Rivera, a City College player who is the top player in CUNY. Bracero can run the floor well, and has a lot of potential.

Diatou Gueyen, a 5 foot 10 inch forward has also dropped out of the team, and Dana Moyal, a 5 foot 1 inch guard is contemplating leaving. Moyal is currently taking 18 credits, and sports a 3.9 grade point average. Coach Christian hopes she can get these players to return in January, but whole heartedly agrees with their choice. She understands that school comes first.

“Doing a juggling act with work, school, and the team, and still maintaining a high GPA sets a good example for the younger players,” says Coach Christian. Her veterans, 5 foot 10 inch forward center Michelle Grayson, 5 foot 8 inch forward Fatmire Ukpereaj, and 5 foot 3 inch guard Annette “Jessie” Chiang, all will serve as a model.

Coach Christian is excited about her new players as well. “All the freshmen will be key players,” she says.

Ayanee Reepe, a 5 foot 11 inch freshman is the only true center on this team, but Coach Christian is trying to recruit 6 foot 3 inch Gena Neil, whose father played on the New York Knicks. If she played she would be the tallest player in CUNY.

Baruch was picked to come in last place in their four-team division, but Coach Christian hopes things will pick up in January, with the expected return of Bracero and Gueyen, she hopes two veteran players will also rejoin the team. Giovanni Nicholas, a 6 foot center who is described as a good low post player who can rebound, and Synika Rickettes, a 5 foot 11 inch forward, will make a big impact on this team. “I figured we could come in first or second,” says Coach Christian. “We would have a better chance of competing if these players played.”

The Baruch States-women played John Jay in the first round of the playoffs last year. Baruch dominated, and left the first half leading by 13 points. They fell apart in the second half because of lack of conditioning. “We could have blown them away,” says Coach Christian.

Practicing for two hours, five days a week, Coach Christian and her assistant coaches Eileen Jamieson and Red Martin are concentrating on conditioning and agility drills. They are designed to help prevent injuries, and give her players the lungs needed to run up and down the court.
