CUNY Joins March Against Ku Klux Klan

Anti-KKK Protestors Outnumber Klan 400-1

The Ku Klux Klan rally that some New York organizations and residents adamantly opposed was more of an anti-KKK rally. In the midst of thousands of protesters, less than 20 Klansmen assembled at 60 Centre Street near City Hall Park Saturday.

"Where is the Klan?" asked one reporter around 12:30 p.m. when only two skinheads, casually speaking to each other impatiently awaiting the arrival of other members, occupied the small Foley Square area. That question was echoed throughout the diverse crowd as people stretched on the tips of their toes and craned their necks to peer at the grounds for the white supremacist group.

A grand total of 18 Klansmen finally assembled around 2 p.m. They were outnumbered by 6,000 counter-demonstrators.

Counting the 2,000 who were floating around, the Klan was outnumbered about 444 to 1.

According to a Reuters report, Jeffrey Berry, the grand wizard of the Church of the American Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, attributed the low turnout to the ban on face masks.

"There's people who belong to this organization who would be fired if they found out they belonged to the Klan," said Berry.

The Klan's request to cover their faces was turned down by a New York City court.

The celebration lasted well into the evening as dinner and cocktails were served on the second floor of Newman Hall following the completion of the welcoming ceremonies.

Renovations on the building were begun in the summer of 1998 according to Karl P. Schmid, assistant vice president for campus facilities and operations. "Renovation costs, including a new boiler which serves the 17 Lexington Avenue building also were approximately $2 million dollars," said Schmid. "The building cost approximately another million."

The bulk of the renovation cost was shouldered by the same state agency that is paying for the new academic complex, the New York State Dormitory Authority. However, according to Altman, money for interior fixtures had to come from another source.

"(New York City Council Speaker) Peter Vallone and Borough President Virginia Fields were present at the ceremonies in recognition of their help in allocating money for the interior [furnishings] of the new building into the city budget," said Altman.

The newly renovated building was named in honor of Steven L. Newman by a unanimous vote of the CUNY board of trustees in the spring of 1997 in recognition of the "extraordinary leadership of Bill and Anita Newman," according to information released during the event.

By all accounts, the dedication appears to have been a success.

"There was a sense of collegiality and warmth throughout the event," said Altman. "Whether you were a student, faculty member or part of the administration, you could not help but feel the collegiality of it."
School of Public Affairs Holds High School Leader Conference

Baruch College School of Public Affairs
137 East 22nd Street
New York City 10010

By Meriwether Jean Francis

The first high school leadership conference was held at Baruch last Thursday, Oct. 12, at the 23rd annual Conference on Public Affairs, had two goals to help prepare students for a variety of careers in public affairs by examining the role of high school students in their communities and by providing high school students with the opportunity to meet with college students and faculty about public affairs.

The conference was organized by the School of Public Affairs and was open to all high school students.

According to Larry Strickler, assistant director of admissions, the workshops and activities were designed to provide a better understanding of the work of the school's faculty and students, as well as provide students with the opportunity to develop their own goals and strategies for success.

 Approximately 80% of Baruch students surveyed said they had seen incidents of academic dishonesty.

By Gretchen Laszcz

Cheating at Baruch is, like at all other institutions of higher learning, a problem. Here is how it is defined on Baruch's website: "cheating is the act of taking, using, or permitting the use of any unauthorized materials, information, study aids, devices or communication devices during an academic exercise."

The students who are given the opportunity to defend themselves before a faculty disciplinary committee are的角色, the college has the responsibility of proving that academic dishonesty actually occurred.

According to Dean of Students Ronald Alem, cheating is not just a Baruch issue but a nationwide problem. "Faculty and students need to address this issue as an extremely serious one."

The workshops and simulations allowed the students to see what it would be like to work in a university setting.

Examples of cheating include copying or allowing another student to see your work during an examination, using unauthorized notes, or engaging in any other form of cheating, according to the office of the Dean of Students.

The Dean's office stipulates a number of punishments for students who are found cheating, depending on the severity of the offense.

Examples of punishment may include receiving an "F" for the course, expulsion from the university, or criminal charges.

Academic dishonesty is unacceptable and will not be tolerated. Cheating, forgeries, plagiarism, and collusion in dishonest acts undermines the college's educational mission and the students' personal and intellectual growth. Baruch students are expected to bear individual responsibility for their work and to uphold the ideals of academic integrity. Any student who attempts to compromise or defraud the academic process will be sanctioned.

The program outlining the Baruch and CUNY code of academic dishonesty is available online.

TICKER NEWS OCTOBER 27, 1999

As you can tell by the headline, there will be a general election on Tuesday, November 2, a vote on the City Charter, a budget proposal to the city council, and a presidential election. Therefore, political participation in the democratic system of government is of the utmost importance, and the right to vote is one of the freedoms and principles are protected. Make no mistake, the only thing that counts in this life is every vote counts toward deciding how justice finds are decided between various communities and people.

Cast your vote this Tuesday, November 2, 2021, vigorously and desirously, for the best choice in each and every one of the elections coming up. If you are not registered to vote, please go to your nearest Board of Election office to register before the deadline.

To vote by absentee ballot, follow these two steps:
1. Fill out an Absentee Ballot Application. You can find an absentee ballot application online by calling 212-VOTE-NYC. You can pick up applications at any election office in New York City. The application must be completed and submitted no later than 5:00 p.m. on the day before the election.
2. Send in your Absentee Ballot. After submitting the absentee ballot application, you must mail in your ballot on or before the deadline. You can mail in your ballot at any time, but you must make sure it is delivered to the city's office by your borough's deadline.

If you are not registered to vote, please go to your nearest Board of Election office to register before the deadline. Call 212-VOTE-NYC for more information.

How long is my registration good for?
You are still registered to vote as long as you have voted in at least one election in the past five years. Even if you have voted in the past five years, you may still be able to vote this year if you have not voted in a federal election. Call 212-VOTE-NYC for more information.

A Rally to End All Racilies

Another blow for the United States Constitution and the Bill of Rights has been struck. Let freedom ring throughout the land, Free speech and freedom of expression have won another round in the courts.

Let it be said that no matter how vile, disgusting or unpleasant the message, that one is never discriminated against. Make no mistake, the right of freedom of expression is one of our most precious and treasured rights and we must vigilantly preserve and protect it.

The sad thing is that it took a Klan rally to get some of us out of our beds and off our backs. We demonstrated to put the hate mongers on notice that CUNY will not allow bigots to 'come into the flow of information could be sharply

Reactions on the Ku Klux Klan in United States History - Part I

By Linda Green

The KKK has been called many things: an anti-Semitic, anti-Catholic, anti-Black organization known in Foley Square, Manhattan. Among the many groups that have come together to fight for our rights, the Klan has always been a force to be reckoned with.

The first Ku Klux Klan was formed in 1925 in Tennessee and quickly spread across the country, with分会 being established in many states. The goal of the Klan was to suppress the growing African American population and to maintain white supremacy.

From 1925 to 1946, the Ku Klux Klan had a membership of over one million people. The Klan was involved in many activities, including violence, terrorism, and even murder.

In 1946, the Klan was weakened by internal power struggles and a decline in membership. However, the organization was not completely disbanded and continued to operate in different forms.

The Klan was once again in the spotlight in the 1960s, during the civil rights movement. The organization's activities were once again violent and, in some cases, led to the deaths of many people.

The modern-day Klan is different from its past incarnations. It is a much smaller organization, with a significantly reduced membership. However, it is still an active group that is involved in many activities, including hate crimes, terrorism, and even murder.

Living with Cancer, One Student's Story

By Christopher Bollard

I am a student at Baruch College and I have been diagnosed with Hodgkin's lymphoma. This is a form of cancer that affects the lymph nodes, which are small organs throughout the body that help fight infections.

Hodgkin's lymphoma is a type of cancer that affects the lymph nodes, which are small organs throughout the body that help fight infections. It is a serious disease that can affect the organs of the body and make it difficult to live a normal life.

The disease is characterized by the presence of an abnormal type of cell called the Reed-Sternberg cell, which is found in the lymph nodes.

The disease is most often treated with chemotherapy, radiation therapy, or a combination of the two. In some cases, a stem cell transplant may be used.

The disease is usually diagnosed through a biopsy, which involves removing a small sample of tissue from the lymph nodes.

The success rate of treatment for Hodgkin's lymphoma depends on the stage of the disease and the type of treatment used. The later the disease is diagnosed, the less likely it is to be cured.

The most common side effects of treatment for Hodgkin's lymphoma include fatigue, chemotherapy-induced nausea and vomiting, and hair loss.

The disease is usually managed with a combination of chemotherapy and radiation therapy. The success rate of treatment for Hodgkin's lymphoma depends on the stage of the disease and the type of treatment used. The later the disease is diagnosed, the less likely it is to be cured.

Regardless of whether we may disagree with the dissenting views and opinions expressed, we must be able to bear in mind that only by protecting their rights to free speech will we safeguard our own.

Mike Tyson looks on after hitting Norris after the bell sounded. Norris would not be able to continue the fight. (AP Photo/Michael Caufield)

"I was turning to go back to my corner, when he hit me in the jaw," he whined, but he wasn't turning anywhere, so that makes him a lying sack of sht. His knee was fine when he was going to his corner, and all of a sudden, he needs life support for the trip back. Loser.

If Mike Tyson gets screwed on this fight, I will never watch a boxing match again.

Let's look at other college teams. The guys that have graduated from various colleges to make up the New York Giants seem to be making a run at the playoffs that at the beginning of the season, seemed out of reach. Turns out, the Giants don't suck after all.

Now to the world of amateur wrestling. World Championship Wrestling has two of the World Wrestling Federation's former writers, and all of a sudden, I am seeing girls in scantily dressed clothing, men slobbering women with guitars, Jeff Jarrett grabbing his crotch and saying the word, "Bitch." Wow. It's good to see WCW copying WWF and making a better product.

For now, we will call their program, WWF Raw-Lite.

A Baruch sports team played a game somewhere someday that passed awhile back. They may have won and they may have lost. Who knows? Maybe I should actually see a game. Maybe I shouldn't. If you really care about the Baruch sports teams, go see a game and write for Ticker Sports. Show me what I am doing wrong. Promise not to get bitter about it... for awhile.

Well, I got to be going now. I am in training for the big Baruch Philosophy mid-term I must take. Go Baruch! Later...
